PICOSECOND PRECISION

Short pulses. Focused photomechanical impact.

PicoClear delivers 750 ps pulses at 532 nm and 1064 nm for professional pigment-, tattoo- and rejuvenation-focused protocols.

01

Dual-wavelength versatility

532 nm and 1064 nm outputs broaden protocol planning across different pigment and ink presentations.

02

Ultra-short pulse delivery

A 750 ps pulse duration is designed to emphasize photomechanical rather than prolonged thermal interaction.

03

Adjustable energy

The system offers stepped energy control across both wavelength configurations.

04

Focused treatment tools

An articulated arm, adjustable handpiece and Focus Lens probe support targeted laser delivery.

PHOTOMECHANICAL DELIVERY

Energy delivered in picoseconds.

Manufacturer materials describe ultra-short laser pulses creating a mechanical effect that fragments targeted pigment into smaller particles while limiting prolonged heat exposure.

532

SUPERFICIAL TARGETING

The 532 nm configuration is positioned for more superficial pigment and selected tattoo-color protocols.

1064

DEEPER TARGETING

The 1064 nm configuration is positioned for deeper pigment and darker tattoo-ink protocols.

FLA

FOCUS LENS ARRAY

The optional Focus Lens Array concentrates energy into microzones for skin rejuvenation-focused protocols.

FLAT TOP EVEN BEAM PROFILE

The manufacturer describes a stable, even output profile across adjustable spot and energy settings.

Laser wavelength, energy, spot size, eye protection and patient suitability must be selected by a properly trained professional using current labeling and safety protocols.

PRECISION AT HAND

A laser platform built for control.

A guided screen, articulated arm and adjustable handpiece bring treatment controls into a compact provider workflow.
